Presentation

Making Air Travel Safer and Faster

Friday 27th April 2007

Whether we fly regularly on business or only occasionally for visits or holidays, getting to our destination safely and in the shortest possible time is of paramount importance. This talk will address some of the recent developments in the field of Air Traffic Control (ATC) automation, which will serve to make air travel safer and faster.

For this talk we return to a format which will be familiar to our long-standing members and which many of them have requested that we reinstate, namely a topical presentation by a technical expert followed by informal conversation over drinks and nibbles.

Lionnel Wonneberger, Director Strategy & Business Development – Asia-Pacific, within the Air Systems Division of Thales Australia, will deliver the presentation. Lionnel started his career with the French Civil Aviation Authority (Direction Générale de l'Aviation Civile) where he was in charge of ATC display equipment programs for all French en-route and approach ATC centres. In 1986 he joined Thomson-CSF (now Thales) first as an ATM Bid Manager, and then in 1990 as Manager of export automation programs.

In 1993 he transferred to Australia to work on the Thales proposal for The Australian Advanced Air Traffic System (TAAATS). Upon Thales' winning the contract for this program he was appointed Managing Director of Thales' Australian ATC operations.

In 1999 he returned to France as Director of the THOMFANS multi-disciplinary team (encompassing Thales Avionics and Thales Communications experts), responsible for the development of systems integrating on-board equipment with ground-based ATC systems. Appointed President in 2002 of the Air Traffic Alliance, a grouping of the companies EADS, Airbus and Thales, he was instrumental in developing the SESAR Initiative for implementation of the next-generation Single European Sky program, encompassing the formation of a pan-European air-transport industry consortium for program definition in collaboration with EUROCONTROL and the European Commission. In order to address the needs of the huge Asia-Pacific market, Lionnel was appointed to his current executive position in 2006.

The talk will be open both to AFAS members and to any guests who may wish to attend.
